TO THE WEST! TO THE WEST!

Before making your arrangements to follow the advice of the "thousands who have already gone," it would be well to consider what has been done to make the journey to your "Homes in the West" as pleasant and

free from danger as human skill and foresight can accomplish.

By consolidation and construction, a road

has been put into operation on the shortest possible line from Nashville, Tenn., to St.

Louis, "the future great City of the world."

This line, the

ST. LOUIS & SOUTHEASTERN RAIL-

WAY,

has, during the past year, earned an environmental reputation for its smooth track, prompt

time, sure connections, and the magnificence of its passenger equipment. Its trains are made up of new and commodious

day cars, provided with the celebrated Miller coupler and platform, and the Westinghouse air-brake.

It is positively the only line running

Pullman Palace Drawing-Room Sleeping

Cars through without change from Nashville to St. Louis. No other line pretends to offer such advantages, either in distance,

time, or equipment. Why, then, journey

by circuitous routes? Do not be induced to purchase tickets to St. Louis or the West by any other line, remember that

The "St. Louis & Southeastern" is the shortest, cheapest, quickest, best and only line under one management from Nashville to St. Louis, and is from 60 to 300 miles the shortest to St. Louis, Kansas

City, Omaha, Denver, California, Texas,

and all western points. It is also the "Chicago Shortest Line," via Evansville.

You can secure the cheapest rates for yourself and your movables on application, in person or by letter, to CHARLES

A PROCLAMATION.

By the President of the United States of America.

The approaching close of another year brings with it the occasion for renewed thanksgiving and acknowledgment to the Almighty Ruler of the Universe for the unnumbered mercies which He has bestowed upon us.

Abundant harvests have been among the rewards of industry. With local exceptions health has been among the many blessings enjoyed. Tranquillity at home and peace with other nations have prevailed. Frugal industry is regaining its merited recognition and its merited rewards.

Gradually, but, under the providence of God, surely, as we trust, the nation is recovering from the lingering results of a dreadful civil strife.

For these and all the other mercies vouchsafed, it becomes us as a people to return heartfelt and grateful acknowledgments, and with our thanks giving for blessings we may unite prayers for the cessation of local and temporary sufferings.

I, therefore, recommend that on Thursday, the twenty-seventh day of November next, the people meet in their respective places of worship, to make their acknowledgments to Almighty God for His bounties and His protection, and to offer to Him prayers for their continuance.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 14th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, and of the independence of the United States the ninety-seventh.

U. S. GRANT.
By the President:
HAMILTON FISH,
Secretary of State.

Popular Education.

It may be considered by some that the Post has fulfilled its duty entirely in the matter of urging popular education, and appropriate means to secure it for the future generations of our country. But there are some things in which one can never feel that duty is done while anything remains to be accomplished, and this is one of them. While the ignorance of the southern youth is growing deeper, and deeper, and deeper, they now are, we do not purpose to remain silent. The infliction of the grievous wrong of withholding knowledge, by not establishing proper methods to diffuse it to those who are entitled to demand it, will be warred against by us so long as it exists.

That spirit of exclusion which is so rife among certain classes of Southerners would, if indulged in to its fullest extent, reduce the people who are under its influence to the condition of the Chinese. To such it is idle to appeal. Wrapped in solitary pride, or embittered by the defeat of their dearest hope, they see but little to live for. Man-kind and life itself are tinged by the sombre hues caught from the perverted views in which all things are beheld by these misanthropes; and the idea of educating their children in anything except to hate Yankees is absurd. The country may be congratulated upon the fact that such men are growing fewer every day, and in a few years the last of these dead will be buried.

If we would escape the perils which beset ignorant men we must bestir ourselves. Indifference places every one who professes or exhibits it on the side of those who are opposed to popular education. It is a work to be accomplished, involving much labor, self-denial and compromise. But the end is worth the means. The conception is positively sublime. A vast republic, guaranteeing a thorough education to all its youth, without cost and without taxation, as will be the case, provided the plan be adopted of so using the public lands. Athens, in her most glorious days, did not do so much; and to compare such a system of public education to the schools of Europe, where the divinity of monarchical government is taught, at the expense of the people, is absurd.

Hon. Geo. E. Badger.

The Hon. H. S. Foote, in his personal reminiscences of some of the great men of our Republic, thus speaks of the late George E. Badger, in the Washington Chronicle:

George E. Badger, of North Carolina, has left behind him a reputation for solid virtue and sound practical intellect which will probably survive as long as this great Republic shall itself continue in existence. I knew him well, both in public and in private life. His heart was full of kind and generous sentiments. Through a long course of laborious public exertion his integrity was never called in question. For many years he was the acknowledged head of the bar of North Carolina, and in the Supreme Court of the United States he enjoyed for a long period a large and lucrative practice, and sustained a very high character both for judicial learning and for general literary attainments. His manner as a speaker was gentle, polished and engaging. He was always perfectly familiar with the cases which he undertook to argue, and never failed to discuss them with a clearness and force which could not fail to command the respect and admiration of all who listened to him. He was always courteous and affable, and on no occasion evinced the least irritability or disrespect toward those with whom he was thrown into conflict. In the National Senate, where he long held a seat, he was always a great favorite. In that body he was not a very frequent speaker, but when he did participate in debate he was ever listened to with marked respect and satisfaction. A true patriot has never lived. He was eminently conservative in all his opinions, and had as little of partisan bitterness as any man I have known. He commenced public life as a Federalist of the Marshall and Webster school, and to the principles first avowed by him he ever most tenaciously adhered.

He regarded the dogma of secession as little less than the emanation of political insanity, in which respect I am inclined to think he did not seriously err. He objected, even to the Constitution of the United States being called the "Federal Constitution," this appellation intimating as he conceived, the idea of a fœdus or league between the States embraced in the National Union. With Mr. Webster, he insisted that the States of the Union were not bound together by a compact between them, as sovereignities, but that they, and the people they contained, had been existing ever since the year 1789 under a government possessing nearly all the great attributes of sovereignty, and absolutely supreme within the sphere of its operation. No man struggled harder than Mr. Badger to ward off the evils of secession. He stood bravely up in the Senate for many years as the honest and inflexible opponent of sectional extremists, alike of the North and of the South. When war came, he could truthfully assert that he had done nothing himself to bring it on; and all the bloody and horrible scenes with which its progress was marked awakened in him sentiments of unmitigated distress and horror. I met with him at his own house in Raleigh, during the second year of the war, and had much conversation with him. He was at that time decidedly of opinion that the conflict of arms then in progress had originated in the most deplorable want of true statesmanship in several distinct quarters, and that there was nothing in the circumstances connected with the elevation of Mr. Lincoln which at all justified Mr. Davis and his associates in commencing a contest that could not be otherwise than ruinous to the South, and dangerous to public liberty everywhere. The strange and marvellous abuses of power which filled him both with surprise and indignation. He never deemed it even possible that the States of the South could succeed in establishing a separate republic; and even had he thought otherwise, such a consummation would have been to him anything but desirable. At the time I visited him last the organic convention of North Carolina was in session in Raleigh, and he was a member of that body. So decided was he in his opposition to the secessionists then existing in Richmond that he thought very seriously of introducing resolutions as a member of the convention denunciatory of the leading measures of the secession oligarchy then in power, and looking to a retrocession of North Carolina from the Confederate alliance, in which, as he supposed, he had become most unwisely entangled. He seriously advised with me in regard to the expediency of this proceeding, and I confessed to have counseled him against it—mainly, though, upon the ground that the popular mind of the South was not then quite prepared to sanction a movement which I should otherwise have greatly rejoiced to see occur. A year after this I again visited this enlightened and high-spirited gentleman. A great and melancholy change had then recently occurred both in his mental and physical condition. He had been stricken with paralysis, that terrible foe to intellect, and his once powerful and brilliant mind had become sadly obscured and enfeebled. He enunciated with much difficulty; his memory, both as to facts and words, had grown dim and confused, and he had been forever cut off from the enjoyment of that high colloquial interchange in which he had always taken so much delight. My last interview with this pure-minded and amiable man was to me most sad and I took leave of him without the smallest hope of ever seeing him again on this side of the grave. Requiescat in pace!

When alluding in what has been written above to the interview between Mr. Badger and myself, in regard to the propriety of his originating at that time a reactionary movement in the convention of which he was a member, against the further submission to Confederate authority of that Commonwealth of which he was a citizen, and my advice to him not then to incur the dangers consequent upon such a proceeding, I should regret to be understood as being at that time at all unwilling to see such an experiment tried had there been ground for a reasonable hope of its success. I had long before this period become satisfied of the absurdity as well as of the criminality of all attempts to break up the Federal Union, and I had always been of the opinion that nothing could justify armed opposition to the Government established by our fathers, but the actual suzerainty of "intolerable oppression." The fallacious character of the extreme State-rights theory had been already completely demonstrated by the open assertion on the part of the Richmond authorities, both in Congress and elsewhere, of the right to prevent

by military force, should it become necessary to resort to this expedient, any one or more of the States called upon from going back into the Union, should they, or any one of them, judge this to be desirable; so that the boasted right of secession was now virtually acknowledged, even by those in whose plodding brains it had originated, as a sham and a deception. Having seceded once, no further exertion of this secession right was held to be allowable. It is, accordingly, a well-known historic fact, which no truth-loving member of the late Confederate Congress will undertake to deny, that on one occasion the proposition was warmly urged in the popular branch of that body to coerce the State of North Carolina into submission to Confederate authority should her people undertake to rescind the ordinance of secession which had been previously adopted, and that when I undertook to protest, as I did, against the employment of military force against one of the States, asserted by the Confederate Constitution itself to be absolutely and unqualifiedly sovereign, the majority of the House of Representatives at once voted to go into secret session, in order to discuss this grave and delicate question with closed doors, so that they might have it in their power to crush alleged treason in the bud before those who had become restless under the unfeeling tyranny then in operation could even become aware of the danger to which they were exposing themselves.

EDITORIAL BUDGET.

—The household troops of Llanillo, King of the Sandwich Islands, consisting of fifty-four privates, not including the band of musicians, rose in meeting on the 7th of September, and by a royal order of King Llanillo they have been disbanded.

—Political affairs are somewhat complicated in Chicago, we judge, from the almost numberless factions taking part in the city canvass. A few of the most common party names are "the Law-and-Order party," "the Independent Citizen's party," "the Leading Citizen's party," "the Hessian-O'Hara party," "the Grand Pacific hotel party," "the Sherman house party," "the White-Jessen-Gassette party," "the Jussen-Gassette-Blakely party," "the Sunday Wine and Beer party," "the Committee of Seventy party."

—In the Stokes trial James Brennan was examined. He said he was in the House of Detention at the time the boys Hart and Redmond were there. He had a conversation with Thomas Hart about the shooting, and Hart admitted that he saw nothing of it, but was promised $1,000 to testify that he did. Redmond also admitted that he shot took place and saw nothing of it. When cross-examined witness admitted that he was an escaped convict from the Penitentiary. As soon as he had finished giving his evidence he was taken in charge by an officer. He will be taken back to the Penitentiary to serve out his unexpired term. Counsel are now arguing the question as to whether testimony showing that Stokes was in fear of his life at the hands of Fisk shall be admitted or not.
